BOURBON AGRICULTURAL BANK & TRUST CO.

Five banks which were organized in Bourbon County now form part of the present Bourbon-Agricultural Bank & Trust Co.

The Bourbon Bank was organized in 1887. Col. E. F. Clay was president until his retirement about 1909, when he was succeeded by Buckner Woodford, who was one of the organizers.

The Citizens Bank was organized about 1873, with John T. Hinton as president for many years. This bank discontinued operations and became part of the Bourbon Bank in 1911.

The George Alexander Banking Co. originated as a private bank in 1898 and came into the Bourbon Bank in 1913.

The Agricultural Bank was organized about 1876. J. W. Davis was president for many years and was serving in that capacity when it consolidated with the Bourbon Bank in 1915, forming the Bourbon-Agricultural Bank & Trust Co.

In that same year, 1915, the Farmers and Traders Bank opened for business with Frank P. Kiser as president. That bank ceased operation in 1929 and came into the Bourbon-Agricultural Bank & Trust Co.

John T. Collins, Samuel Clay, Buckner Woodford and John F. Davis have served as presidents of the bank since the consolidation.

The interest aroused by the sesquicentennial celebration in 1939 led to the acquisition and restoration of these buildings, accomplished by the untiring efforts of Mrs. Wm. Breckenridge Ardery.

The matching stone facing of the Ann Duncan House is from "Fairfield" where three or more sessions of the County Court were held before a county seat was established.

Clay, 1808-1878, a leader in the importation of pure-bred livestock, was president of the Bourbon County Agricultural Society from 1840-1877 and of the Kentucky Agricultural Association from 1853 to 1861. He drew his own plans for his Georgian home, "Auvergne," which he erected on land granted to his father by Patrick Henry in 1783. The house and land are still owned and occupied by descendants.

Letter of Welcome:

To all Bourbon Countians greetings; to our visitors and guests, greetings and a sincere welcome to our one hundred and seventy-fifth birthday celebration. We hope and believe you will thoroughly enjoy our historical windows, our parades, our Spectacle and the many other special events planned for the eight days commencing Saturday May the thirteenth.

Primarily each community lives within itself; and for this reason we're particularly proud of what planning this Celebration has done for us — the citizens of Bourbon County. We're proud of the new friends we have made; of the universal cooperation and togetherness it has generated. We're proud of the new adult leaders it has uncovered and of the way our young people have joined their elders in participating — they're our civic leaders of tomorrow you know.

Natives and new-comers have always felt that Bourbon County was the best place in the world — we're made more aware of this as we watch one hundred and seventy-five years of history unfold in our Spectacle and read about it in this Historical Program.

We're proud of our County! Each generation, each period, has its perilous times — we feel that we are in such a crisis at this hour. As we read, listen, look, and subsequently re-live our one hundred and seventy-five years during our Celebration we realize that each period of our history has had its crises. We will also know that by embracing the principals of God and Country, as did our forefathers, Bourbon County, Kentucky, and our nation will not only survive these crises, but will emerge stronger and better.

We of Bourbon County have reaped, and will continue to reap the rewards of presenting this Celebration. To all our visitors and guests we thank you for joining us. The Celebration Committee; the entire populace of the Country; is at your disposal to make your visit most enjoyable.

Sincerely,

Robert W. Walker
General Chairman

FOREWORD

On this our 175th anniversary we extend birthday greetings, not only to those who live within our present boundries, but also to those in other counties with whom we share a common origin. Bourbon County has diminished in size since the pioneers wrested it from the wilderness with their sweat and their blood, but it is undiminished in prestige and tradition.

One hundred and seventy five is a ripe old age even for a county. Outwardly at least, these years seem to have dealt kindly with Bourbon County. Towns have grown and flourished. Beautiful old homes in gracious county settings seem to deny the passage of the years. Bourbon hospitality is still famous in spite of changing times. The scars of civil strife lie hidden beneath the gently rolling bluegrass pastures. New generations have sprung up to replace those who fought and died on foreign soil to preserve our way of life.

We are proud to have a share in the colorful pageantry of this celebration and to forge a new link in our association with the rich traditions of the past. It is a time to greet old friends and to meet new ones. It is a time to look back and to look forward. A time to pay our homage to those who have gone before and to rejoice in our mutual heritage, and a time to face the future with hope and renewed inspiration.

THE PREHISTORY OF BOURBON COUNTY

By Berle Clay

Of the earliest people who lived in the county, we can say very little. By comparison with other counties surrounding Bourbon, we may postulate that some time before the birth of Christ, perhaps as early as 1300 B.C., there were wandering hunters in the area who followed the game trails to the Salt Licks, killing the big game, such as the mammoth, as they came to these places. Their organization was simple, their possessions few. They roamed as family units, each fending for itself by hunting with their large, fluted spear-points of flint.

There was no definite population in central Kentucky until after 800 B.C. In the western river valleys of the state, there was a development of people who lived on fresh water mussels and small game. This so-called Archaic Culture did not penetrate to the Bluegrass. From 800 B.C. to 800 A. D., the first farmers, the Adena people, spread over central Kentucky and occupied it extensively. The characteristic feature of their culture was the earth mounds which they raised over their dead. These mounds could not have been the work of individual families, but was rather the work of many, organized into a functioning and cooperating group. How there could have been such an organization based on the meager economy which they possessed is a problem confronting anthropologists today.

About 900 A.D., a more advanced group of farmers definitely appeared in Bourbon County. Perhaps their culture was a development of the Adena culture; perhaps it represents a new influence from the Mississippi River Valley. These Fort Ancient People raised corn, squash, and tobacco and lived in large villages along the river valleys. During the 1930's one of these villages was excavated in Bourbon County. The cultural material from this excavation is at present in the Museum of Anthropology at the University of Kentucky, where it is being studied in terms of the similarities between it and the remains from similar villages in other parts of Kentucky.

These people lived in the area until the coming of the white man, perhaps until 1600 A.D. By that time they had been decimated by the white man's diseases, smallpox, measles and the common cold, against which they had no immunity. In time they disappeared altogether, leaving it to the roving Shawnee whom the first settlers encountered.

KENTAHTEH THE LAND OF TOMORROW

A Delaware and Wyandot Legend

In ancient times many distinct tribes of Indians roamed the western plains. In a time of great drought the Lenni Lenapes from the far northwest and the Mengwe from further south were forced to move eastward seeking new pastures. They met on the banks of the Mississippi.

In that day the Ohio valley was occupied by the Alligewi and so with true courtesy the Lenapes asked their permission to pass through their land if there was not room enough for both tribes to live in the valley. At first this favor was granted but when the Alligewi saw thousands coming through they fell upon them and slew great numbers. Then the Mengwe who had been mere spectators offered to join the fight on the side of the Lenapes on condition they would share the country. Together they drove the Alligewi down the Mississippi.

Before the Mengwes and Lenapes left the valley for the eastern coast they set a branch of their tribe, the Wyandots, to guard the land until their return, calling it by the Wyandot name, "Kentahteh," Land of Tomorrow. They never returned to their Land of Tomorrow but fear of their doing so kept the other tribes away until the Mengwe descendants, the Iroquois, ceded the country to the British Crown by the Treaty at Fort Stanwix, N.Y., in 1768. The Lenape descendants gave their name to the Delaware River and the Alligewi's name is preserved in the mountain range which early travelers to Kentucky must cross.

At the time of the visits of the earliest Indian traders there were but two Indian villages in what is now Kentucky, both Shawnee towns, Eskippikathiki in Clark County and Shannoah on the Ohio River in Greenup. But there were well traveled war paths along which the Shawnee, Delaware, and Wyandots from north of the Ohio River came south driving the Chickasaw, Cherokee, Catawba, and Creeks from their hunting grounds.

Two such paths were in Montgomery County, one of which came into Bourbon. Here early surveyors discovered a wild plum forest at Shawnee Lick, probably planted from the pits of fruit which warring or hunting Indians carried in their pouches. As late as 1882 the post office in Flat Rock precinct preserved this name, Plum Lick.

BOURBON COUNTY FORMED

On Dec. 29, 1785, the bill authorizing the formation of Bourbon County from the northeastern portion of Fayette was introduced in the Virginia Assembly but not acted upon until January following the Christmas recess. The author was evidently Hon. James Garrard, who lived here while representing Fayette. According to tradition he secured the bill's passage and chose the name. Having some French ancestry and great appreciation for the aid furnished by Baron Steuben, Baron de Kalb, Comte de Rochambeau and the Marquis de La Fayette in the Revolutionary War, Mr. Garrard thought it suitable to name the new county for the reigning House of Bourbon. The text of the bill recites that the county would be organized at his house.

The only other Fayette County representative was Hon. Christopher Greenup, his successor in the governor's office, who immediately moved to Harrodsburg as clerk of the Kentucky District Court. Hon. John Edwards, afterwards a U. S. Senator in 1792, was a member of the same legislative session but attended as the representative from Lincoln County and moved here when Bourbon was organized.

Mrs. Elizabeth Mountjoy Garrard graced the position of "first lady" during the two successive terms in office of her husband, Gov. James Garrard, 1796-1804. One of her unusual pieces of pioneer equipment was an herb still for brewing home remedies from the essences of wild plants and garden products.

MONEY IN PIONEER KENTUCKY

By F. M. STROKER

Among the interesting exhibits on display in windows during the celebration is a collection of Continental Currency loaned by Rev. Thos. F. Lipscombe of Ruddell's Mills. It belongs to the period in which our county was created through little of it was circulated as far west as Kentucky. Here the first salaries of officials were computed by the English system of pounds, shillings, and pence, but were usually paid in tobacco. Almost all businesses were conducted by the barter system.

The scarcity of "hard money" is told in the travels of Thomas Ashe, an Englishman who spent the night in Millersburg and breakfasted at a tavern in Paris in 1806. Upon learning he owed 1 shilling 3 pence for his meal and 9 pence for feeding his horse he handed his Paris landlady a dollar. She pitched it to her man servant with the command, "Chop it." "Chop it, madam? I want it changed," protested Ashe. The servant expertly cut out wedges of the coin with a chisel, a quarter and then an eighth (called a "bit") and handed it back to the traveler. Discovering that this was the customary way to get change Ashe requested him to cut two more dollars for him and found it useful in his journey.

This method of making change caused such losses that the Kentucky Assembly passed an act on Feb. 8, 1809 providing for a 3 percent discount on the exchange of "cut money" and forbidding its acceptance in the payment of taxes after April 1, 1812.

BOURBON

In a discussion of mediums of exchange in a pioneer period we should not overlook the one which changed a proper to a common noun, bourbon.

In the earlier years before there were roads, when the small number of livestock in Kentucky could not consume the heavy crops of corn, distilling was practically a universal custom. Bulk and storage space were reduced in the process. The product could be floated north to the Ohio and down the Mississippi River without deterioration. There it found a ready market.

There are those who claim that no good whiskey was made until a Scotch distiller brought in a moisture-measuring device which would make the product uniform. To insist on this idea is as unreasonable as to assume that there were no good cooks until oven thermometers were standard equipment. In addition to this, years before he arrived in this country Bourbon County farmers made whiskey so well that they established a demand for it by name. If some other county's product was superior it would not have been named bourbon.

Descendants of Capt. John Hamilton of Townsend Valley claim he made the first whiskey when he brought a still from his brother's farm in Washington County, Pennsylvania, to Kentucky while the Whiskey Rebellion was going on in 1794. Loading it on a large canoe he brought it down the Monongahela and the Ohio to Limestone, hauling it overland to the Lair farm at the former site of Ruddell's Fort by rough sled. But a year before that the Kentucky distillers met in Lexington to protest the requirement that the excise tax on whiskey must be paid in specie. There was almost no hard money in circulation. According to Collins' History the first distillery in Bourbon was built in 1790 by Jacob Spears and others. There is a story that the use of charred barrels originated after some barreled whiskey accidentally burned and its flavor was discovered to be improved.

Be that as it may, Jacob Spears was using charcoal in connection with his whiskey making when he died in 1825. He won the prize for the best 1000 gallons of whiskey exhibited at the Bourbon County Fair in 1821. Accordingly it is safe to believe his son Noah's claim that their barrels which he marked, "Bourbon" created the demand when he marketed it for his father. Noah Spears made thirteen trips by flatboat to New Orleans walking home over the Indian and robber-infested Natchez trace and bringing home the pay in Spanish dollars. This is the coin used by all the early Kentucky silversmiths for making cups, spoons, and other tableware.

In 1810 there were 110 distillers listed in the first and only census of manufactures. The enumerators were puzzled whether to consider whiskey a manufacture or a farm product. One farmer in every four owned and used from one to three stills at that date.

During the six days in August 1801 as many as seven preachers of the Presbyterian, Methodist, and Baptist denominations preached simultaneously. Spontaneous hymn singing, exhorting, and prayer by laymen and converts added to the emotional excitement. The Presbyterian elders counted 1000 communicants of their faith. Other denominations and non-members attended in great throngs.

The Superstructure erected 1956, over Cane Ridge to preserve the old log church built in 1791. As a Presbyterian Church the congregation was formally dissolved in 1811 but the building was used for occasional preaching until 1816. It is revered as the scene of the "Great Revival" and the birthplace of the Christian Church under Barton W. Stone, a denomination which united with Alexander Campbell to form the body sometimes called Disciples of Christ.

BOURBON COUNTY IN WAR TIME

Inasmuch as 1961 marks the centennial of the Civil War it seems suitable for our Historical Scrapbook to contain some material about the county in that period of its history.

One of the first symptoms of trouble brewing on the local scene was a challenge issued on June 20th, 1859, by Hon. Garrett Davis to Capt. Wm. E. Simms, a candidate for Congress, to fight a duel. The provocation was Simms' denunciatory language in a speech at Ruddell's Mills about an article which Davis had written for the "Western Citizen." Both men lived in the edge of Paris and both had distinguished careers in law and politics. It seems more than a coincidence that some of the action of the war occurred around the homes of these two leaders,

Garrett Davis

Hon. Wm. Simms, Member of U.S. Congress 1859-61, Senator in the Confederate Congress.

To sketch their backgrounds briefly for an understanding of their rivalry both were born in neighboring counties and began to practice law at Paris. Davis represented Bourbon County in the Kentucky Legislature from 1833 to 1835, and served as a member of Congress from 1839 to 1847. He was not ambitious to hold office, however, and declined to be a candidate for lieutenant-governor in 1848, or for governor in 1855, or even for President in 1856 when nominated by the American party. He did act as a member of the 1849 Constitutional Convention and in 1861 was elected to the U. S. Senate where he served until his death in 1873. He bitterly opposed secession, which Simms advocated.

Simms, who was twenty-one years younger, organized a company of men, a few months after his admission to the bar, and served as captain of the Third Kentucky Regiment of Infantry in the Mexican War. In 1849 he was a member of the Kentucky Legislature for one term. In 1857 he became editor of the "State Flag", a Democratic newspaper published here. Two years later he was elected to Congress for one term.

All attorneys and public officials in Kentucky after 1814 had to take an oath that they had never given, accepted, or carried a challenge to fight a duel and would not do so as long as they continued in office. To engage in one at this time would have barred the participants from ever offering themselves for office again. Occasionally Kentuckians got around this by leaving Kentucky soil to fight outside of the state. In this instance they went by train to Cincinnati accompanied by their appointed seconds, but at the last moment were dissuaded from going through it by the united efforts of Gov. Chas. Morehead, Hon. Richard Hawes, and Hon. Richard Hanson of Paris, all able attorneys and politicians.

THE STATE GUARDS

When the legislature convened that winter Gov. Magoffin called attention to the threatening condition of national affairs and recommended a reorganization of the militia system, which had been active from the date of Kentucky's settlement up to the time of the Black Hawk War. Accordingly, in March the legislature adopted a law to provide for three types of membership, the volunteer or active State Guards, the enrolled militia, and the reserves. Among the first groups organized on June 13, 1860, were the Little Rock Greys and the North Middletown Blue Rangers. They were drilled by Mexican War veterans and afterwards went into the service of the Confederacy under their official inspector, Gen. Simon Boliver Buckner, a retired West Point officer.

In the middle of December, 1860, Senator John J. Crittenden of Kentucky offered his famous compromise resolutions in Congress to avert trouble over the slavery question. They were rejected, however, and so were the proposals of the border states' representatives which he accepted and offered as substitutes. In the meantime Major Robert Anderson of the U. S. Army burned the inside of Fort Moultrie in Charleston harbor and retired to Fort Sumter. A peace conference assembled in Washington in February 1861 to submit amendments to the Constitution. In April a border states convention was called to meet at Frankfort in May, but it was almost too late to prevent war.

Hon. Garrett Davis made speeches on the political questions of the day throughout the county; Senator Crittenden spoke in Fayette, both appealing for neutrality. Within twenty days Fort Sumter was bombarded and the war began.

On April 26, 1861, President Lincoln told Senator Davis in a conversation at Washington that he contemplated no military operations that would require him to march troops into or across Kentucky. Furthermore if she made no war upon her own government of the United States it would make no war upon her. In conference with five leading Democrats in the Kentucky legislature on the 10th of May, Hon. Richard Hawes of Paris agreed that Kentucky should take no part in the impending conflict but occupy a position of armed neutrality. But by May 15th, a Kentucky Regiment of hot-headed young Southerners was in service under Col. Blanton Duncan at Harper's Ferry, Virginia. Three days later Lieut. Wm. Nelson, a Kentuckian in the U. S. Navy, obtained at Washington 5000 muskets and bayonets to be shipped to Cincinnati to arm the Home Guards and loyal Union men of Kentucky. Bourbon County's share was three hundred but far more were shipped here for distribution to the surrounding counties. In June another shipment of the same size came through.

These violations of the spirit of neutrality were excuse enough for other young Southerners to begin recruiting for the Confederacy. On the 17th of July, Capt. James Morrison Hawes of Paris resigned from the U. S. Army to organize a regiment, closely followed on July 23rd by the local Hamilton Guards who left by train for camp Boone near Clarksville, Tennessee, over the Kentucky border. On Aug. 2nd, Capt. Brent & Shakespeares' Home Guard gave a local military demonstration.

In August, the above mentioned Brig. Gen. Nelson established Camp Dick Robinson in Garrard County in distinct violation of neutrality. By the opening of the legislative session in September a considerable difference of opinion developed among the Unionists, some wanting the camp removed at once, others desiring it to stay. Bourbon County was fortunate in her choice of Hon. John A. Prall as her state senator at Frankfort. A firm Unionist, he desired above all to keep the peace in Kentucky. He thought that the entrance of Confederate troops at Hickman was provoked and used as an excuse for placing an army camp in Kentucky. Later he opposed much of the punitive legislation aimed at confiscating the property of Southern sympathizers. But he was often in the minority.

POLITICAL ARRESTS

Political arrests were soon the order of the day. By going to Virginia to visit relatives Hon. Richard Hawes of Paris escaped arrest. Since he was sixty-four he was too old for active war duty but he served the South in the commissary department for six or eight months.

Judge Richard Hawes 1797-1877, member of Congress 1837-41, member of the Paris bar 1843, unanimously elected Provisional Governor by the Confederate Council 1862, and served to the end of the war. County Judge and Master Commissioner of Bourbon County 1866-1877. (From a tin-type in the collection of the former Richard Hawes Chapter, U. D. C., now at Duncan Tavern.)

On Oct. 9, the publication of the "State Flag" at Paris was suspended. Probably the old files were destroyed at the same time. Through the courtesy of Rev. E. H. Brandts, Paris Catholic priest, Capt. Wm. Simms received a mysterious warning that he was about to be arrested. He succeeded in getting out of his back door just at the moment the authorities entered the front and began searching for him. Hastily mounting his horse he galloped across country about two miles to "Woodlawn" the home of the Holt family. There he was concealed in the attic until officials had given up hope of finding him. His meals were carried to him by one faithful servant who was the only member of the household to share the secret of his being there with the head of the house. So well was he guarded that he succeeded in making his escape to Cumberland Ford in time to organize a company of recruits to serve under Humphrey Marshall by Oct. 14th. There he met Lieut. Col. R. G. Stoner of Bourbon County who had enlisted at Mt. Sterling two days previously. They were soon joined by others from this section.

After serving in Eastern Kentucky until February 1862, Mr. Simms, now a Confederate Colonel, was chosen senator to the Confederate Congress by the provisional legislature in session at Bowling Green. For some months after the army disbanded in 1865, Col. Simms remained near Charlottesville, Virginia, only returning to Bourbon County and his former home a short time before his marriage to Miss Lucy Blythe of Madison County in the fall of 1866. When the military arrests began, Mr. Simms, with considerable forethought sold "Mt. Airy" to the wife of a legal colleague, Mr. Frank Troutman, hoping to save it from confiscation. For assisting in the sale Mr. Troutman was arrested and imprisoned.

The house was taken over as barracks for the Union Army. The deep hollows in the lower part of the yard were scooped out to raise gun placements for two cannons higher up. One was kept trained upon Paris and one upon the Kentucky Central Railroad below the cliff. All the trees in the yard which might interfere with the view were cut except one tall pine in which lookouts were stationed.

At the end of the war when it was returned to the then owner, Miss Kate Troutman, she received only $5000 for it in a sale to Joseph Neely in spite of the fact that a tract of thirty acres went with it.

THE FIGHTING IN AND AROUND PARIS

According to official reports there was fighting here on four occasions, on July 19, 1862, March 11, 1863, April 16, 1863 and July 29, 30, 1863. We had no great, decisive battles but we had brother fighting against brother, families alienated from their nearest kin, and untold anxiety. The town was frequently placed under martial law, at which times wood for fuel and food became quite scarce. Both sides impressed horses. Robbers also stole them under pretext of taking them for government use, but kept the money when they collected on delivery. Prominent citizens were arrested on suspicion of Southern sympathy, and imprisoned. Their property was confiscated. Free colored persons were impressed for duty as teamsters and workers on Federal fortifications. The southern soldiers were inclined to slip in through Cumberland Gap and visit their homes in secrecy. Frequently they were caught and imprisoned, sometimes executed in reprisal.

MORGAN'S FIRST VISIT, July 17-19, 1862

On Monday July 14th, the Home Guards went out to re-enforce the eighteen or twenty bridge guards because of a rumor of Morgan's approach. Perhaps it was a wise move for that night Confederate cavalymen burned two bridges between Paris and Cynthiana, and one below that place. In apology for not destroying the Townsend bridge Major Dick Gano of Bourbon reported to Morgan that seven of his pickets got on the wrong road and groped around in the dark until daylight. He said that in firing the Kiser Station bridge they accidentally burned a shed below it where Mr. Kiser's distillery was.

On Tuesday they again guarded the bridge at Paris and placed seventy-five guards on the Georgetown Road, for Morgan now occupied that town. On Wednesday a Major Billach came from Cincinnati with twenty or twenty-five convalescent Federal soldiers, who though not able to fight, helped to plan the disposal of the local force to resist the invasion. They were cheered by the arrival of eighty-five cavalymen from Maysville under Hon. Wm. Henry Wadworth, member of Congress. These reinforcements hardly had time to partake of hasty refreshment before the message came that the enemy were approaching on the Georgetown Road. The small, defensive force, numbering about one hundred and sixty or seventy men, lined up on the heights of Walker Ave. and Fairview. The miscellaneous group of townsmen of all ages, who armed themselves any way they could, were directed by Capt. Hugh T. Brent of the Home Guards.

Capt. J. B. Castleman with two companies of men, dispatched by Morgan to keep the roads open through Paris for his coming, lined up at the toll-gate house on the pike and sent Capt. Weller under a flag of truce to demand the immediate and unconditional surrender of the town. Major D. E. Pugsley of the bridge guards sent the reply, "Sir: If you want Paris you must fight for it," a sentiment much applauded.

At this unexpected resistance Capt. Castleman withdrew and went into camp in the yard of U. S. Provost Marshall Greenberry Reid (where Homer Wilson lives). While awaiting Morgan's arrival he improved their situation by burning a bridge between Paris and Lexington and tearing down the telegraph lines.

On Thursday the 17th, Col. J. V. Guthrie arrived with a hundred men who had been dispatched by railroad from Covington to Cynthiana to assist Gen. Landrum of the 18th Ky. Regiment at that place. Not knowing how badly he would need them before the day was over, Landrum sent them on to Paris to guard the trestle bridge. A scouting party in the direction of Newtown learned of Morgan's strength at Cynthiana and so Senator Prall was sent to Lexington to ask military reinforcements of Gen. Ward, the commander there.

About 8 o'clock at night Gen. Landrum came telling of the bloody engagement and defeat of his men at Cynthiana. Under these conditions Col. Guthrie thought it prudent to retreat toward Col. Metcalfe's camp near Lexington until actually reinforced. His withdrawal left the town without protection and Morgan's men soon took over without any difficulty. They received congratulations from their friends, tore down the flag from the Courthouse, and the next day supplied themselves with clothes, horses, and arms.

Meanwhile Col. Guthrie made contact at daylight with Metcalfe's advance guard about four miles this side of Lexington. Joining forces he then turned back toward Paris and marched all day, camping in Jacoby's woods at dark. During the night their pickets were driven in three times. Guthrie then formed his men in battle line with the infantry and artillery holding the advance and placed them formally under the command of Gen. Green Clay Smith, the whole force now numbering about 1200. In the morning they again formed in battle line a mile from Paris on the Lexington road and stood awaiting Morgan's attack for an hour and a half before learning that he had left town for Winchester.

"The Police Took Off Their Coats to Fight"

"Two companies of Cincinnati Police were eager and ready to fight", Guthrie reported, "and under their chief, Colonel Dudley, were anxious to meet the enemy." They were doomed to disappointment for the enemy had already evaded them. The whole Federal force then made themselves comfortable at Morgan's fortified camp for the next twenty-four hours. Upon Guthrie's finding his one hundred men still unable or unready to pursue Morgan to Winchester he left them in Paris, from which they returned to Cincinnati by train.

Among the Union soldiers of Metcalfe's command stationed at "Mt. Airy" was Sergeant John Parsons who described some of the fighting in and around Paris in a diary he kept. One item worth noting was an instruction by a superior officer that in training the cannons on the town they must be careful not to aim toward Sen. Garrett Davis' house for fear of injuring Mrs. Davis, who was in residence. Did this information leak out and was it relayed to John Hunt Morgan? Or was it only a typical act of bravado that led him to camp in Senator Davis' Woods the night he returned from the battle of Cynthiana? His doing so is part of Gen. Green Clay Smith's official report to the Adjutant General of Kentucky. If Morgan had known that Senator Davis returned from Washington that same night while he was fortifying a camp in Davis' woods he would probably have arrested him and paroled him to give no further aid to the Union cause, as was his custom.

THE MORGAN MYTH

"The State is in imminent danger of being overrun by Morgan and those joining him," wrote Brigadier General J. T. Boyle to Hon. E. M. Stanton, Secretary of War, on the 19th of July. "Morgan's force has increased—is estimated at from 2500 to 3500. I do not believe it so large. Every species of falsehood is circulated by traitors at home, producing consternation among the people, to get the people to rise. Morgan proclaims that Breckinridge is coming with 30,000 men. Traitors through the state circulate it."

Home built for Hon. Garrett Davis between 1826 and 1839 by a contractor named Giltner. Renamed "The Larches" it is now the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Harris Clay.

This exaggeration of strength gave him great advantage for he was often enabled to capture a large force with inferior numbers. He had announced he would return in twenty days. The Unionists' disbelief was their undoing.

THE AFTERMATH

In retaliation for Morgan's raid Gen. Leonidas Metcalfe of Nicholas County, who had been enrolling a regiment of Union soldiers for some time, made preparations for putting them in the field. On June 27, he had opened a camp near Cynthiana and now he moved from Camp Miller to "Sunnyside" near Paris (Mr. Renfrew's.) His enlistments numbered 1700. On August 16, 1862 he mustered in 700 of them at Paris. Before they were properly armed and drilled, they were ordered into action at Big Hill, Madison County, in one week's time, and in two weeks they fought at Richmond with great losses in killed and wounded. In indignation Metcalfe resigned and the remnant of the 7th Ky. Volunteer Cavalry was transferred to other units under other commanders.

The Confederate Occupation

In July Col. Nathan Bedford Forrest came through Paris recruiting for Confederate Cavalry. On August 31st, Sunday night, the legislature met at Frankfort to transact routine business and adjourned to Louisville taking the state records with them for the Confederate Army was uncomfortably close.

By September 4th the Federal troops evacuated Paris and on the 10th Confederate Rule was established. The Home Guards were paroled, their guns were confiscated. The Confederate Provost Marshal required acceptance of Confederate money and one merchant who refused it was arrested. Co. F, 7th Regiment of Cavalry was organized in Millersburg and Company D, 8th Regiment left Clintonville for training at Camp Chiles in Fayette County.

The long awaited plans for the inaugural of Hon. Richard Hawes of Paris as Provisional Governor to succeed Geo. W. Johnson began to mature. The day was set for October 4th, at Frankfort. The gala occasion began under a bright sky. Flags waved, brass bands played, and cannons fired salutes. Richard Hawes in his address "told the listening crowds that "The state would be held by the Confederate Army, cost what it might," a statement and assurance uttered in perfectly good faith, and which his proud and honorable nature would have scorned to make had he suspected that the vacillating Gen. Bragg had deceived him and that the Confederate army had even then commenced its ill-advised retreat. Four hours later, the new government left Frankfort in dignified haste, never to return."

On October 26th, the fine, large house which Hawes had occupied on the west side of Main Street near 10th, was taken for a government hospital and so abused that he was not able to occupy it on his return from war.

The Year 1863

About any action of March 11, 1863, and April 16th, the official records are discreetly silent. Copies of the local paper are properly numbered as if regularly issued but there are some gaps. Only small incidents are reported.

On the 28th of July, 1863, at two o'clock the Post Commandant, Col. Young, was informed that the rebels occupied Winchester. About four their advance drove in the pickets, but a hundred men of the 23rd Michigan and one artillery piece from an Illinois Battery held them in check until another Michigan company and a field piece from an Indiana Battery came up.

Fearing that they might be flanked on the Maysville pike Col. Young sent a detachment of the 118th Ohio Volunteer Infantry and two other pieces of the 15th Indiana Battery to guard the bridge approaches. The fighting continued for two hours after which the Confederates withdrew the way they came, crossing over at Stony Point to go out by Mt. Sterling. Capt. Greenberry Reid and a dozen of his scouts pursued them long enough to make them believe they were followed. Doubtless they camped at this time a short distance off the North Middletown Road in the Dodge woods. There Mr. Edgar Dodge plowed up part of a scabbard and dug a minnie ball out of a tree which he cut many years ago.

According to the diary of Mrs. Georgia Williams Stuart the rebels were near again on June 8, 1864, tearing up the railroad and destroying bridges, while only a few soldiers and two cannons were left to defend the town. Scouts patrolled the next night. All through the day following the cannons could be heard firing at Lexington, where Gen. Burbridge was. The rebels left there by way of Georgetown. On the 11th Burbridge came to Paris to move the Government stores and thus save them from capture. The Union Army was again badly defeated at Cynthiana, but reported 100 Confederate dead, 400 prisoners taken, and many dead lying along the roadside.

Military Hospitals

Large numbers of wounded from both battles of Cynthiana were cared for in Paris. There are traditions that almost all of our public buildings were used as hospitals. The Odd Fellows' building at the corner of 5th and Main, new in 1855, is supposed to have been used by both Confederate and Union armies but this cannot be verified by their records.

The Presbyterian Church, built in 1787 (where Mr. McCurdy now lives) on High Street, was photographed while used as a Union Hospital. The picture is faded but one can easily see the patriotic bunting draped in curves from the three fan shaped windows across the front. The center one is high above a handsome palladian window and the other two are over the two entrance doors.

The Bourbon Academy building, between 4th and 5th on Pleasant Street, was vacated as a hospital Oct. 31, 1862 and the remaining patients removed to the Post Hospital at Lexington. In 1865 it may have again been taken over for there was no building available for school use at that time.

There was no Paris term of court held in 1864 because the Courthouse had been occupied by soldiers all winter and the building was not in condition to be used.

The buildings and grounds of the Fair Association were occupied so often that no fair was held in 1862 nor in 1864 and in other years the dates had to be postponed a number of times.

The women of Bourbon County gave wonderful service in nursing the sick, cooking and packing boxes for the larger military hospitals, and sewing and sending all kinds of clothing needed to make the men comfortable.

SCENE OF FIGHTING July 29-30, 1863

In their haste to leave town between the retreating and pursuing armies civilians clogged the ample two-way bridge and rushed aside to this old crossing through the water. Until the first bridge was built in 1797 this ford was the one used by incoming settlers. It was the site of the early bridges but because they were frequently washed out by spring freshets the Wernwag bridge, here shown, was erected in 1833 on higher ground. For a full century it stood firm, for each post was cut to lean at a slightly different angle to the arches, and the supporting horizontal timbers curved inward at the center to compensate for any sidewise swaying which the wind might produce.

Our illustration is photographed from an oil painting made by a young drug-store clerk before the railroad came through. It was presented to Duncan Tavern by Judge George Batterton. The "Old Green" in the foreground was a favorite place for holding Fourth of July celebrations, barbecues, and some agricultural fairs including one in 1840. It was the scene of the religious meeting held in 1807 by the young group seeking a basis for Christian unity. After one such session at which their own views were somewhat clarified by the preaching of Reuben Dooley, these young ministers agreed to practice immersion and began by baptizing each other, starting with David Purviance, Dooley, and Barton W. Stone.

The courthouse at the top of the hill is the one contracted for in 1797 and used from 1799 to 1872, when it burned. The stone foundation was laid by young Thomas Metcalfe (1780-1855) afterwards Governor, the superstructure erected by his much older brother, John Metcalfe, a married man in 1782, and the woodwork fashioned by Mr. McCord. In 1816 the little box cupola was removed and this delicate and symmetrical spire put up by Aquilla Talbott. It was a "piece of architecture greatly admired, even by foreign visitors." A golden fish, a globe and a lightning rod surmounted it.

This steeple is the same one climbed by young Kellar Anderson, April 20, 1861. After a public meeting called by fifty-eight prominent Bourbon Countians to condemn the national administration's course and to approve Governor Magoffin's, attended, it is said, by thousands, three young men decided to plant the Confederate flag on top of the courthouse. James Bashford and Charles Talbutt found their ladder vibrating so perilously that they came down rather shaken by their experience but Anderson scaled the steeple, stood on the globe which upheld the weathervane, planted the flag on the apex, and sang the "Star Spangled Banner" in a loud, ringing voice. After descending from his lofty perch he rushed off to join Captain Jo Desha's company of a hundred Cynthiana recruits, one of the first units to enlist for the Confederacy. They passed through Paris on April 22, on their way to the Southern Army.

THE HOME GUARDS

On the next day the Home Cavalry met at the courthouse and organized a company of Home Guards, electing Major George Williams, a Unionist leader, Captain.

GILL HOTELS

Fort Lauderdale, Florida

"Miss 175th" and a companion of her choice, will be the guests of Gill Hotels for an entire week of sunshine, activity and relaxation, to be divided between a Gill hotel in Fort Lauderdale, Florida, and the Gill-owned British Colonial Hotel in Nassau, Bahamas. The lucky winner will also be provided round-trip air transportation from Fort Lauderdale to Nassau via Mackey Airlines, the "Sunshine Airline."

The 200-room British Colonial in Nassau is the largest hotel in the island capital and has been called a "city-within-a-city" for its complete day-and-night-time round of activities. Located on one end of bustling Bay Street, the "bargain shopper's paradise," the British Colonial has two private ocean beaches, a par 3 golf course, tennis courts, boating, water-skiing, skin-diving and deep-sea fishing facilities, with professional instructors in all sports. The shopping arcade just off the lobby is lined with specialty shops offering imported china, crystal, cashmeres, and other delectable items.

An hour aboard this Mackey Airplane and you will leave enchanting Ft. Lauderdale and arrive in the British-Bahamian atmosphere of Nassau. Three fun-filled days at the Gill hotel of your choice in Florida will be a lasting memory and three more delightful days at the British Colonial hotel on the island to look forward to . . . this is all yours "Miss 175th".

The Dura Corporation was founded in Detroit, Michigan, in 1923 as the Detroit Harvester Company and was engaged mainly in manufacturing farm harvesting equipment. The corporate name was changed to Dura Corporation in 1959.

The Paris Products Division of Dura Corporation was built in 1952 and began operation in 1953. The plant was located here through the efforts of The Chamber of Commerce and the city of Paris.

At present the Paris Products Division has about 175 employees, most of whom reside here in Bourbon County. The products include machined automotive parts, gear boxes, coolant pumps and tandem suspensions for trucks.

The Paris Products Division, the Parasol Witches, the Dura Dapper Dans and the Dura Ticklish Kissers join the rest of Bourbon County in celebrating the 175th anniversary of our historic county.

WOMAN'S EXCHANGE

The Women's Exchange started its business venture in 1928. As the years passed on the Exchange grew from a small crude setup to the full fledged business it is today. The Main Attraction being home-cooked foods such as cakes, pies, country cottage cheese, cream, butter and a host of other various items. Through the years, the Woman's Exchange changed hands several times and each new owner improved the appearance and made it a more attractive business site. With the famous display window of home baked foods, it attracts not only hometown folks, but visitors and tourists as well, who often become regular customers after they have once sampled the food. It is presently owned and operated by Mrs. Robert W. Walker at 719 Main Street.

Western Auto Associate Store

The store opened October, 31, 1927, in a location that was a part of the building that is now occupied by the Paris Laundry. A year and a half later the firm moved to larger quarters in which it is now located, the building previously having been occupied by the Kroger Co., which had then moved to new quarters across the street in a building owned by the Odd Fellows.

Bluegrass Stays - Hemp Goes

Woodford Spears & Sons, local seed and feed dealers, have an interest in the bluegrass business dating back to 1817 when Jacob Spears advertised in the Ky. Reporter to buy it "in the ruff". Raising bluegrass developed importance around 1797 as extensive clearing of the cane fields began.

Captain E. F. Spears, Jacob's grandson, after operating a flour mill on what is now known as the Spears Mill Road, entered the grain and seed business in Paris in 1886. E. F. Spears & Sons engaged extensively in bluegrass and hemp processing, these being two of the most important money crops of the county at that time. The firm had warehouses in Lexington, Danville, Lancaster, Burgin, Stanford and Nicholasville, with the main plant being located in Paris on South Main Street.

Around 1920 hemp growing dwindled due to competition from the Philippines and the decreased demand for rope. One of the firm's last contracts was to supply the hemp for the renovation of the old battleship "Constitution".

In 1923 the present firm was established by Woodford Spears with his two sons, Edward and Charles, as partners. A bluegrass cleaner is being operated by the firm at the old hemp location on South Main Street.

Woodford Spears & Sons' flour mill, built around 1905, was active until after World War II. It has now been converted largely for processing seed and grain, which continues to be an important service to Central Kentucky agriculture.

LYNNWOOD FARM

Mickey Stewart's slow, country drawl has been heard on radio country music shows, giving livestock and tobacco reports and the like for about 15 years. The master of the 565-acre Lynnwood Farm became interested in the thoroughbred horse breeding through business interests that were connected with that drawl.

After World War II he became manager of a tobacco warehouse in Lexington, which was owned by a syndicate composed largely of thoroughbred breeders. The syndicate later purchased a stockyards and Stewart's broadcasts were an adjunct of these interests.

The farm, located a mile south of Paris on the Paris-Lexington Pike, now has about 65 mares.

"First horse I bred was a good one," Stewart said. "He was a colt from Johns Joy's first crop." Named Derby John, he won four races as a 2-year-old in 1955. Through last year he had won nine races and earned $28,000.

Brief History of SMIT'S GREENHOUSES

Smit's Greenhouses has been in its present location nearly 40 years. Mr. Jan Smits, the owner, came to America from The Netherlands on St. Patrick's Day, 1907, going to work on Elmendorf Farm in Fayette County. He returned to Holland in 1913. The next year he married and returned to Lexington. Later the same year he moved to Paris, taking a position as gardner for Miss Lucy Simms. After 10 years in that position, he purchased six acres of property and started in business for himself. The first greenhouse was built in 1924. He sold vegetables only for a few years until the southern markets took over. Each year the flower plants were in greater demand, so the truck garden business was discontinued. Deliveries were made then with a horse and wagon. As the business prospered, he built additional greenhouses and at present there are five greenhouses. Mr. Smits with his three sons now operate the business in the same friendly manner and cordially invite everyone to visit them at any time. The business is located on the Peacock Pike or West Second Street, one mile from Main Street.

HANSLEY MILLS

INCORPORATED

PARIS, KENTUCKY

Manufacturer of
Men's and Boy's Underwear

ESTABLISHED IN PARIS, KENTUCKY IN 1941

Providing Employment For More Than 400 Local Residents

Our Slogan — "A GOOD PLACE TO WORK"

Three score and some years ago we came to Paris and opened a store across from the courthouse in a building known as the Ficklin Building. After a few years we moved to the corner of Main and 7th Streets and moved to our present location at 619 Main Street in 1910. Through those years we have served Paris and Bourbon County with quality clothing, shoes and furnishings. We still sell well known brands and "quality at fair prices" will continue to be our policy.

(P.S. — Although it will be questioned by some people, none of the present owners were working in the first store.)

Let us continue to serve you with truly fine merchandise.

RUNNYMEDE FARM

The 377-acre Runnymede, operated by Catesby Clay is located 3 miles north of Paris on the Cynthiana Pike. The farm has 12 mares, including 3 boarders, and has the stallion Cyclotron.

The farm was launched on its thoroughbred history in 1877 when Col. Ezekial Field Clay and his brother-in-law Col. Catesby Woodford, saw a filly by imported Billet in a race at Churchill Downs. They had entered the horse business the year before and wanted the stallion, purchasing it for $5,000 and bringing him to Runnymede from Decatur, Ill.

At Runnymede Billet sired America's first $100,000 winner, Miss Woodford, cited as the greatest race mare ever produced in America. Billet also sired Raceland, winner of 70 races; Sir Dixon, the champion handicappers Belvidere, Runnymede and Barnes.

History of NEWBERRY'S

The history of the J. J. Newberry Co., one of the nation's leading general merchandise chains, is a story of true success for the founder, the late John J. Newberry, and for many of the people in the huge organization who have worked to attain positions of responsibility.

From the first store Newberry owned in Stroudsburg, Pa., in 1911, the organization has expanded into 537 stores operating in 47 states.

In 1919 he was joined by his brother, C. T. Newberry, who previously had a successful career with another leading mercantile firm. The two Newberry brothers formed a partnership in 1919 and incorporated in 1923.

In 1919 another brother, E. A. Newberry, joined the company and became president in 1939 and chairman of the board of directors upon the death of his brother J. J. Newberry in 1954.

The company today is headed by John E. Nelson as president, who is a veteran of 30 years with Newberry's and, like all merchandising and store operations executives in the company, started his career in the stockroom of a store.

J. V. Newberry, a nephew of J. J. Newberry, the founder, is now vice president and manager of the company, having come up through the ranks.

The company has headquarters in a 25-story building at 245 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

The local Newberry store was opened in January 1929 and is now managed by H. D. Jasper.

SPRING HILL FARM

At the western outskirts of Paris on the Georgetown Road, lies Spring Hill Farm, owned by James D. Norris.

The farm was acquired by Norris in 1946, the new owner beginning immediate and extensive improvements to convert it into a thoroughbred horse farm and show place.

Some of the leading horses that have been produced from this farm in its 15 years of existence are Nell K, Jamie K and Kitty Girl, each having earned winnings of over $100,000.

Another famed horse from Spring Hill is Easy Spur, who won the Michigan Derby and over $200,000 in purses.

Clifford M. Blake is the resident farm manager of Spring Hill Farm.

TB HOSPITAL

The District 3 Tuberculosis Hospital at Paris is one of five new State Tuberculosis Hospitals. The first patient was received in June 1950. The Paris TB Hospital was the first of the five to be opened. The site of the hospital, on 50 beautiful acres of Bluegrass farmland, was donated by the Bourbon County Fiscal Court. The hospital serves 23 counties in Central and Northern Kentucky. Since the hospital opened nearly 8,000 patients have been seen on either in-patient or out-patient basis.

As an active and interested member of the Bourbon County community, the hospital, its patients and personnel, wish the very best success for the Bourbon County 175th Birthday Celebration.

STONER CREEK STUD

One of the few breeders to combine successfully a racing stable with breeding for the yearling market is Mrs. John D. Hertz. She is the owner of the 729 acre Stoner Creek Stud, located 3 miles east of Paris on the North Middletown Road. About 55 brood mares are on the farm, which has Count Fleet and Count of Honor as its two stallions.

Primarily responsible for the success of her farm was her husband's admiration for a fighter.

Hertz, Chicago transportation executive who had been active in boxing circles, one day saw a colt try to savage a rival which was passing him. Admiring the spirit if not the sportsmanship of the colt that so hated to be beaten, Hertz bought the loser, Reigh Count.

He became an important sire for the Hertzes and got for them one of the greatest horses ever to race in this country, Count Fleet, champion 2-year-old of 1942 and unbeaten Horse of the Year the next season.

Count Fleet won the Pimlico Futurity, Wakefield, Champagne, Walden, Preakness, Withers and Belmont Stakes, Wood Memorial and Kentucky Derby, earning $250,300. He won his last 10 starts and was never unplaced in 21 efforts.

Possibly more than any horse since Man o' War, Count Fleet dazzled his opposition with blinding speed.

Besides Count Fleet, Stoner Creek stands Robert Lehman's Count of Honor, Westerner Stakes winner, whose first foals will reach the races this year.

In addition to the Lehman stock, Stoner Creek boards mares for such other breeders as Mrs. Lloyd Tate, Edward Lasker, John F. Kenaston, Edwin Weisl and Mrs. Paul M. Hexter.

The best Hertz-bred of 1960 probably was Fleet Nasrullah, winner that season of the San Pasqual and Hollywood Premiere Handicaps, and the rich Californian Stakes. Mrs. Hertz sold him to Ellwood Johnston for a reported $150,000 in Dec. 1959.

Among the Hertz home-breds of 1960, the best possibly was 3-year-old Our Rullah, winner of the Oceanside Handicap and La Jolla Mile.

To the Folks of Paris and Bourbon County . . .

We of the DIXIE BELL DAIRY CO. appreciate the privilege of being able to serve you good people of one of the finest and most aristocratic communities in Kentucky. As your community has grown from the era of the horse and buggy days into one of a modern agricultural and industrial center, it has developed a community spirit that is continually seeking the ways and means of becoming still a better place in which to live. The Dixie Bell Dairy Co. is certainly proud to serve you.

Dixie Bell has grown, too, just as has your community. Over a quarter of a century ago, the firm was begun, starting in a small way, as most businesses do. We have grown into one of the largest local dairies in Central Kentucky, serving some 27 towns throughout the Bluegrass area. With modern laboratory facilities and the finest in pasteurization and bottling equipment, we strive to produce the finest dairy products that can be obtained. Our agent in Paris, Stewart Ingels, was born and reared in Paris and has a lifetime experience in the dairy business. He has refrigerated trucks to keep up with the modern standards of the milk industry and is ready to serve you at all times.

Again — thanks to all of you for allowing us to be part of your community and may you continue to grow and prosper in the years to come.

E. K. RICE, Insurance

(Donaldson & Rice)

520 Main Street

This general insurance agency was established in 1915 by Miss Grace Donaldson. E. K. Rice entered the agency December 1, 1933 and a partnership was formed in July, 1936. Rice acquired full ownership upon the retirement of Miss Donaldson in January, 1954. The James D. McClintock Insurance Agency was acquired in January, 1955, which gave the firm seven old line, time tested stock companies, among which are the Hartford Fire, established in 1910; the Aetna Casualty Surety, established 1819, and Springfield Fire and Marine, established 1849.

Mrs. Ralph Connell became affiliated with the agency as secretary in July 1955 and is now the executive assistant.

The strength of the agency is in its Personal Service to its policyholders. It insures many of the historic homes of Bourbon County as well as Duncan Tavern, the state shrine of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

STRODES CREEK FARM

James D. Drymon, son of Ira Drymon, struck out on his own in the thoroughbred business at the 308-acre Strodes Creek Farm, which is located 7 miles east of Paris on the Spears Mill Road. The farm has 30 mares and two stallions, Count Turf and Mr. Turf.

Drymon breeds for the yearling market. Last summer at Keeneland, Strodes Creek sold a pair of fillies for $33,500.

John A. Morris bought for $19,500 a daughter of Johns Joy, out of a half sister to the Hyde Park Stakes winner Head Start. Reginald W. Webster paid $14,000 for a Bolero filly from a half sister to the Roseben Handicap victor, Inroc.

Drymon and J. B. Faulconer, publicity director at Keeneland, also sold two yearlings in partnership for $14,300, an average of $7,150.

Webster bought the colt member of this duo, a son of The Doge out of a half sister of stakes-winner Abstract and Metal Mike. Verne J. Winchell Jr. bid $6,300 for a filly by Arctic Prince from a half sister of the Tomasello Memorial hero Valdina Alpha.

For Jack J. Amiel, Drymon boards the stallions Count Turf and Mr. Turf. The former won the 1951 Kentucky Derby, the Dover Stakes and Questionnaire Handicap, earning $166,375 during his active career; he has sired the good horse Manassa Mauler.

Mr. Turf, which entered stud in 1960, took the Wilson Handicap and 28 other races and earned $161,043 in 120 starts to the age of 10.

In addition to Amiel, Drymon boards breeding stock of other horsemen, including Dr. Laurent Guy, Dr. Frank A. O'Keefe and Bayard Tuckerman.

Recent stakes winners bred by Drymon include Chalk Talk, Natego, ranked as one of the best 2-year-olds in the Midwest in 1959, and Sal's Beau, winner of a division of the Lafayette Stakes in 1960.

MONTEREY FARM

"Bill Talbot and Jack Goode and I got to talking about the thing," Ned Brent says as he recalls his start 21 years ago in the thoroughbred breeding game. "Bill's family always had horses it seemed and, of course, Jack's father was one of the best trainers around here. We bought three mares from J. W. Parrish's estate."

Brent's 770-acre farm, known as Monterey, is located 3 miles south of Paris on the Lexington-Paris Pike. It has 16 mares and the stallion Fleet Feet.

In recent years, Brent has been breeding on his own, selling most of his yearlings at Keeneland but racing a stable of four or five horses each year. He moved from Paris in 1942 to the farm named for the Monterey station on the old interurban line which ran in front of the Brent farm.

In 1957, Brent camp up with a pair of top 2-year-olds, Fleet Feet and Polamby.

Fleet Feet, by Fleeting Star, won his first two starts, then ran perhaps his best race at Saratoga. He led all but the final strides (even though suffering bucked shins in the race), only to be beaten by a head by Claiborne Farm's Nadir, voted champion 2-year-old of that season.

Fleet Feet came back the next year but injuries prevented his demonstrating his full potential. He finished second in the Shevlin and third in the Choice stakes, retiring with four victories and earnings of $22,330. He now stands at Monterey.

Polamby, by Ambiorix, racing through last season, earned $128,000. She won the Astarita Stakes at 2, placed in the Acorn Stakes at 3, and at 4, won the Firenze Handicap and placed in the Delaware, Diana and Gallorette handicaps.

Last year, Brent retired from the seed business which he and his father had maintained as one of the largest in this area for many years.

FISTER'S GARDENS

Although the Sylvester Fister family moved to Bourbon County from Fayette County in May, 1951 and engaged in farming and extensive truck gardening, producing 25 acres of vegetables on their 70-acre farm, Fister's Gardens did not come into existence until 1956.

Hoping to add a new line to their farming, gardening and plant bed business, the Fisters decided to grow a few pansies—about 200 dozen in 1954. That venture proved so successful that the following year they increased the number of pansy plants and added a few perennials, petunias and annuals. All of these were grown in hotbeds.

In the fall of 1959 evergreens and landscaping were added to their already full schedule. Now 2½ acres of beautiful little evergreen seedlings are lined out in the Fister's fields.

MT. LEBANON

W. G. Talbot, owner of 380-acre Mt. Lebanon, 3 miles north of Paris on the Peacock Pike, began breeding and racing thoroughbreds in 1936. He now has 12 mares on his farm. His heritage in the post of racing extends back into the 19th century, and his family roots in Bourbon County are almost two centuries old.

Gov. James Garrard, W. G. Talbot's great-great-grandfather and second governor of Kentucky built the house on Mt. Lebanon Farm in 1785. (The house was actually constructed for him by stone mason Thomas Metcalf, who also became a governor of Kentucky.)

First member of the Talbot family to have race horses was W. G. Talbot's father, who raced a stable on New York tracts in the 1890's and early 1900's. When New York racing began to wither on the vine under the threat of repressive legislation. Talbot dispersed his stable in 1909-10.

CREEKVIEW FARM

As the name implies, Creekview Farm lies on the banks of Stoner Creek, its 590 acres overlooking the beauty of the stream as it winds through Bourbon County bluegrass acreage. Tollie Young has owned the farm for nearly a half century and his thoroughbred yearlings have peered over white plank fences at the creek bend in front of the farm for some 32 years.

The farm has 30 mares, including 15 boarders and is located five miles east of Paris on the North Middletown Road.

Young got into the thoroughbred business at the urging of Jay Weil. They formed a partnership, buying a couple of mares, which proved profitable. Later Young began a long, successful association with Harry Hart, the aluminum racing plate man.

In 1943 Young bred three stakes winners and gained the distinction of breeding the first two by Roman, They Say and Lady Gunner, the latter being one of the top 2-year-old fillies of 1945. The third was Air Rate, the first stakes winner by Deliberator and one of the last good runners from the distinguished sire line of Glencoe-Hanover-Wise Counsellor. .

A perennial consignor in the Keeneland sales, Young has been a director of the Breeders' Sales Co. for many years. Hewas elected president of the Thoroughbred Club of America in 1950 and became a director of the Keeneland Association in 1953.

In 1888 George Graves and Leonard Cox employed one clerk and founded a very small Hatter's and Haberdasher's Shop on the corner of Upper and Main Street in Lexington. Their business grew and within ten years Graves, Cox and Company had purchased the Whitehall Clothing Store and moved to present location of 126 West Main Street.

In 1899 Kentuckians were relieved that the Spanish-American war was over and that the sovereignty of Cuba had passed from Spain to the United States. In those days their customers could purchase a silk lined, made to measure suit for $25.00! Henry Watterson of the Courier-Journal suggested the nomination of Admiral Dewey for President of the United States and General Fitzhugh Lee for Vice President, and their competitors advertised Teezledown night robes for 48c and Balbriggan underwear for 45c.

Many changes and innovations have been made in the retail field since 1888. Now Graves, Cox and Company employ five buyers and fifty other specialists to serve its customers.

We, Leonard Cox Jr., President and Joseph C. Graves, Jr. Vice President-Treasurer send warmest regards and wishes to the Bourbon County 175th Birth-day Celebration and the ver ygreatest success.

FAIRBANKS, MORSE & CO.

Congratulates Bourbon County on its 175th Birthday

Fairbanks, Morse & Co. is one of the oldest manufacturing companies in the United States, originally founded as E. & T. Fairbanks Company in St. Johnsbury, Vt., in 1830, by Thaddeus Fairbanks who invented the lever scale. One of the earliest branches of the company was opened in Cincinnati, Ohio, by Mr. Charles Hosmer Morse in 1865. In 1873 the company began the manufacture of windmills. This was followed by pumps, steam and internal combustion engines. Fairbanks-Morse has been progressive as has Bourbon County. Some of its products are scales, diesel engines, pumps, electric motors, and generators, locomotives, compressors, magnets and electronic equipment.

Fairbanks-Morse is proud of its part in the progress of Bourbon County. The original municipal power plant of the city of Paris inaugurated in 1932 was equipped with two 330 KW Fairbanks-Morse diesel engines. At present there are five large Fairbanks-Morse diesel engines in this plant with a total capacity of 5567 kilowatts. Fairbanks-Morse is also proud of the fact that the new water plant now being installed at Paris is 100% Fairbanks-Morse pumps and electric motors.

PARIS

In Paris a number of new churches have been built and the Baptist, Christian, and Episcopal Churches have erected education buildings. Meteer House has been added to the facilities of the Presbyterian Church.

Several new subdivisions have been opened to provide sites for new homes, Bourbon Parkway, Crestland, Crestwood, Crombie Heights, Linwood and Yorkshire Estates. A hundred low-rent housing units were built in 1953 and 1958 and plans made for thirty more in the near future. By the end of the current year the Urban Renewal Project will have removed forty-five dilapidated houses and other buildings from a five acre tract in the heart of town to be replaced by additional low-rent housing units and single private dwellings.

Four manufacturing plants provide year around jobs: Builder's Supply, employing sixteen persons, Dura Corporation 175, Gay-Bell Corporation twenty-one, and Hansley Mills 475. Seasonal employment is offered by Liggett & Myers' Redryer. The Electric Steam Radiator Company has recently closed its Paris operations but will transfer the plant to another firm in the near future.

To provide water service for the new homes and factories the city has added to the water plant, built a new filtering basin and two new storage tanks of such great capacity as to enable us to withstand a drought of several months' duration. A new fire engine with new fire and police equipment and personnel makes us a safer town and ninety-eight mercury vapor lamps from the northern to the southern limits of the city make us a brighter one. Seventeen additional ones are ready for installation from the bridge of the Georgetown Road to Main Street. The beautiful lighting of the Courthouse dome was a project of the Rotary Club. A new city office, parking lot, police station, and city barn are other improvements mentioned by Mayor E. W. Glass.

Paris has two new drive-in banks and a parking lot for customers of the third one. Three new motels serve tourists.

The churches of Paris include:

The Chamber of Commerce and almost twenty civic organizations offer opportunity for service toward civic betterment.

Recreational facilities have been increased at the school playgrounds and two Teen Centers are operated for school students. The American Legion Park with its fair grounds and exhibition buildings and Garrard Park, with its thirty acres of space for outdoor activity, are used for the benefit of young and old, for family and community picnics, games, and outings of all kinds.

An Architect's Drawing of the Gateway under Construction at the Entrance to Garrard Park With the Inscription for the Bronze Plaque To Be Placed on the Right Hand Pillar. The Inscription will read "Donated to the City of Paris By the Hansley Foundation, Inc., As a Memorial to Sol J. Levy Who Worked Constantly For Community Improvement. April 1, 1961."

MILLERSBURG

Mayor Wadsworth Jones reports that the city limits of Millersburg have been extended northward to the Cynthiana Road and that all city services are now available to residents of that area including the "Green Meadows" subdivision. Among the new buildings are a new dormitory and Memorial Gymnasium at Millersburg Military Institute, a new county elementary school, a telephone building to house the dial exchange, and a motel. All the streets have now been blacktopped. The W. R. Stamler Corporation employs sixteen persons in manufacturing mining machinery.

Millersburg has the following churches:

JUDYVILLE CHURCH OF FAITH — Rev. Riblon Gray, Pastor.
 MILLERSBURG BAPTIST CHURCH — Rev. R. D. Aubrey, Pastor.

IN MEMORIAM

By MIRRIAM BERLE CLAY

(from a list compiled by the Bourbon County Woman's Club)

All those who have served in armed conflict for their country's good we hold in high esteem, whether they gave their lives in battle or were fortunate enough to return to their loved ones and homes.

We here list only those who died in the war, not because of any lack of appreciation for those who came home, but because for us, mortal as we are, the only immortality for the dead that we can readily grasp is loving memory.

Therefore in loving memory we place here the list of those who died in World War II and in the Korean Conflict:

Jack G. Adair	John W. Hennesey	James W. Patton
Miller C. Ashcraft	Everett Hedges	John B. Peterson
Leslie Allison	Ewell Conway Hurst	Franklin Theodore Prindle
Wm. Maston Aldridge	Leo Hutson	Joseph Prows
John Bunyan Bates	William Joseph Johnston	Charles Radislovich
Jesse Colliver Booth	Graham E. Jones	Cecil Clay Risen
Robert Lee Brown	Henry J. Keller	Marion Robbins
William T. Clay	Henry B. Lail	Scott Saylor

A marker placed by the Bourbon County Garden Club as a memorial to soldiers of World War I and II directing attention to the planting of the Blue Star Memorial Highway from Maine to California, under the sponsorship of the National Council of State Garden Clubs, Inc. The Kentucky section runs from Maysville to Paducah.

Placed near the entrance to Bourbon Parkway, this marker stands on a segment of the old Indian Warrior's Trace, the Alawantowiamowee, a path first made to the salt springs by the prehistoric mastodon and afterwards traveled by herds of buffalo.

When the Fayette County Court appointed a committee of fifteen men headed by Daniel Boone to choose a route from Lexington to Limestone in 1783, it recommended that the trail pass Grant's Fort and Bryan Station continuing by an extension of that present road to a point near Hutchison and joining what is now Route 68 near Hopewell Church. After that year the road was sometimes called Smith's Wagon Road, named for the daring pioneer who first attempted passage over it by wagon. At that time it was a whole day's journey from the landing on the Ohio River to the top of the big hill overlooking Maysville.

Over this trail in 1787 came the first scientists who visited the Mississippi Valley, Dr. Antoine Saugrain and M. Piquet, French botanists. In the 1790's they were followed by Andre Michaux and in 1802 by his more famous son, Dr. Francois Andre Michoux. These men preferred walking as did the famous scientist, Constantin Rafinesque who, while a member of the Transylvania faculty in the 1820's made innumerable trips across the Alleghanies to Philadelphia and back gathering all kinds of specimens as he went.

In 1784 the publication of John Filson's "Discovery, Settlement and Present State of Kentucky" (containing Boone's autobiography) aroused such interest that many editions were printed in France, Germany, Ireland, and England. In consequence hundreds of foreign tourists traveled through Paris over this same road. Numbers of their early journals describe the town.

Twenty years later the road was called the Cumberland Road when a crude highway route was mapped between Cumberland, Maryland, and the West. It was the first postal road in the country and ran from Zanesville, Ohio, through Kentucky and Tennessee to Florence, Alabama, and later extended to New Orleans. Formerly iron milestones recording the distances stood on the edge of the post road. Some were cast at the Amanda Furnace near Ashland by Wm. Lindsay Pogue.

Though Andrew Jackson vetoed federal aid for the building of this road in 1830, its completion was carried out by private subscription and some state aid. It was the first macadamized road in Kentucky. It became a national stage route. A register of seats applied for, that year, shows that space was reserved at Paris for the trip to Washington, D. C., by Hon. James Clark, afterwards governor of Kentucky, Senator Joseph Desha, former governor, Senator Felix Grundy and Col. James K. Polk of Tennessee on Nov. 23rd. Three days later Hon. Robt. Letcher, afterwards governor of Kentucky, Hon. Cave Johnson and Hon. John Bell of Tennessee were Washington bound for the same session of Congress. Bell had a long record of political service and is remembered as Kentucky's favorite in the 1860 campaign which elected Lincoln to the presidency.

That same register of travelers listed tourists from Germany, Turkey, Mexico, Ireland, England, and a concert singer from Switzerland. From the time of the early saltmakers and the Battle of Blue Licks to the present date Route 68 has played an important role in history.

BELL SHELL SERVICE

8th & Cypress Streets • Phone 1133

Operation began November 13, 1946, as a partnership business known as Bell & Courtney Shell Service. Emmett Bell, the present owner, purchased Courtney's interest January 1, 1948.

The motto, "Service Is Our Business," has been the key to the success of the business down through the years.

The business, in addition to marketing Shell products, holds a Goodyear franchise and offers many other nationally advertised brands of merchandise.

At the present time Bell Shell has four full time employes and two that are part time.

Transylvania Printing Co.

Established in 1872

A landmark in Central Kentucky for almost a century. The early publications were almost all religious in nature the most prominent publication was the 'Apostolic Times'.

Down through the years, Transylvania has expanded their services adding office supplies, office furniture and commercial printing.

The firm is one of Central Kentucky's oldest business establishments and presently travels salesmen in fifty-five counties of Central and Eastern Kentucky.

Two recent additions to Transylvania's services are noteworthy.

First, the recently opened Transylvania Studios offering professional service for office planning and decorating.

Second, the past month Transylvania has added a complete department of drafting, engineering and surveying equipment and supplies.

Transylvania's pledge of service continues to be, to bring the most modern and up to date office furnishings, office supplies and printing to their many customers throughout this area.

Transylvania Printing Company congratulates Bourbon County on this their 175th Birthday Celebration.
